AMONG THE FARMERS.
"REPEATED FLOW."
Opportunity.
"They do me wrong who say I come no more when one I knock and fall to find you in, for every day I stand outside your door and bid you wake and rise to fight and win. Weep not for precious chances passed away, weep not for golden eggs on the water; each night I burn the records of the day, at sunrise every soul is born again."

Forest Insect Attacks.
That the danger from insect attack is at present even more serious than that from fire, was brought out by H. B. Pierson, State Forest Entomologist, in a recent talk before the Forestry Club at Bangor. "In Maine alone," said Mr. Pierson, "the damage from insects in the Maine Forestry Division during the last ten years has been over ten times that caused by fire. Furthermore, many fires have resulted primarily from the vast amount of dead wood left by the budworm. Very often trees injured by fire are finally killed by insects. The forest is often left in a much worse condition following an insect outbreak than following a fire. Reproduction on areas of dead wood is over 70 per cent fire and under the piles of debris no reproduction occurs. In lumbering operations considerable attention must be given to the utilization or the placing in water logs before they are attacked by wood-boring insects."

Another Good Lot of Fancy Birds.
WESTERN MAINE POULTRY ASSOCIATION
GIVES THIRTIETH SHOW.
A good show of poultry was made by the Western Maine Poultry Association at its thirtieth annual exhibition in Norway Opera House for three days last week, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Over 500 entries were received by C. Guy Buck, the secretary. The actual number of birds on exhibition was not quite so large as in some previous years, though this was not apparent to the casual observer. One exhibitor from Bangor, who made a large number of entries was unable to bring his stock on account of illness in his family.

Are You Producing Clean Milk?
Maine dairymen have much to be congratulated on. Maine produces more milk than any other New England state. Figures show that Maine has been among the first in having less tuberculosis among the states east of the Mississippi River. But in spite of these facts many producers, through careless-ness or neglect, have not living up to the reputation which Maine dairymen have established. Let us all work together to make Maine milk superior to any other in the world.

Seed and Crop Notes.
Over 8,000,000 pounds of sweet corn for seed was produced commercially in 1922, which is an increase of 100 per cent over 1921, but only 20 per cent less than the five-year average.
Commercial production of garden peas for seed in 1922 totaled 46,000 pounds, an increase of 75 per cent over the production in 1921. The average production for the last five years was 54,000 pounds.
Pumpkin seed to the amount of 119,800 pounds was raised commercially on 772 acres in 1922.

Value of Farms.
The average value of land and buildings per acre in the United States in 1920 was $70.04, as compared with $69.00 in 1910.
The average value of land and buildings per acre for the United States as a whole in 1920 was $10.51, as compared with $7.71 in 1910.
The value of implements and machinery per farm in 1920 was $558, as compared with $479 in 1910.

ISLAND MADE PLEASURE SPOT
Juan Fernandez, Made Celebrated by "Daniel Defoe," Told of Attraction for Tourists.
A holiday on Robinson Crusoe's island will be possible in the near future.
The charming little island of Juan Fernandez, where Alexander Selkirk spent four years of his life, and whose story led Defoe to write his famous masterpiece, is to be transformed into a holiday resort.
It belongs to the Chilean government and can be reached by steamer from Valparaiso. The island is thirty-six square miles in extent, and is heavily wooded with splendid tree ferns, orange trees, myrtles, and sandal wood. It is mountainous, and full of ravines and torrents. "Grows in wild gorges and on the mountain sides, and among the ferns. The climate is said to be ideal."

BRUSHES FOR HOUSEHOLD
They May Be Divided Into Three Classes, Which Are Bristle, Hair, and Fiber.
There are two classes of brushes, those with backs and those without. Of these in bristle, hair and fiber. It is the brush with bristles that are of special interest in discussing household needs.
The backless brush has the advantage of being usable in any position of hand and gives no leaves, as long-handled as the brush whose only working surface is one side. These brushes are marvelously made and the bristles, hair, fiber or fabric (mop) are fastened to a good scrubbing brush, but the bristle would not be stiff enough. Many fibers are made to look like bristle, but the bristle test will save you from a rash purchase. The bristle brush is a good scrubbing brush, but the bristle would not be stiff enough. ALLIGATOR A GOOD MOTHER
Takes Care of Young in Much the Same Manner as Does the Hen of the Barnyard.
The female alligator lays a great number of eggs with hard shells, which in size and general appearance resemble hen's eggs. She buries them in a nest built in a curious manner.
Along the bank of a stream spread a layer of mud and grass or leaves, and on this is placed a layer of eggs, then another layer of mud and grass about seven or eight inches in thickness, then another layer of eggs, and so on, until the nest is about three feet high. The eggs are hatched by the heat of the sun, and the decaying vegetable matter in the nest. As soon as the young are hatched, the mother alligator takes care of them as a hen does her brood of chickens, until they are strong enough to defend themselves.

Popularity of Rubber Heels.
Sixty per cent of the shoes manufactured in the United States today are said to be equipped with rubber heels. Shoes with rubber heels are equipped with rubber heels than shoes for women. It is estimated that 75 per cent of the rubber heels manufactured are for men. The United States is the largest producer of rubber heels, and the demand for them is increasing rapidly. The rubber heel is a new development in shoe making, and it is a great improvement over the leather heel. It is a great improvement over the leather heel, and it is a great improvement over the leather heel.

Ask Law to Protect American Names.
At the nineteenth annual meeting and reunion of the Sons of the American Revolution, held in this city, resolutions were passed asking that a national act be passed by Congress making it unlawful for any person to assume the name of any of the famous Americans, or to use any of their names for the purpose of obtaining a profit. It was also asked that the protection of such names and to avoid confusion, the organization seek to prevent foreigners from taking any colonial or American names which have been made prominent—Boston Globe.

Good Time Coming for Benny.
We have often said of a certain little boy in the neighborhood whose mother is dead that his dad was both father and mother. The father married recently, and the boy, on hearing the news, clapped his hands and said: "I'm so glad for Benny; he'll have a woman mother now."—Exchange.
Chinese Use of Ginseng.
The little yellow root of the ginseng plant is used by the Chinese as food and medicine. Specimens resembling the human body often command their weight in gold because of supposed occult virtues. Neither species of ginseng, however, is considered by the accidental physicians to have any pronounced medicinal qualities.

Fudge in the Making.

Probably no other candy is so well known and so often made as chocolate fudge. Fudge is almost sure to be the first candy that a amateur attempts. And yet, often as it is made, it is surprising how seldom one finds a home-made fudge which is really smooth and creamy. The reason for this is due to the fact that few housewives follow a tried and proved recipe, so that their results are invariably questionable.

In making fudge, as with all candy making, the candy thermometer is invaluable. By its use, one can at all times be sure of the exact temperature, thus eliminating any guesswork. Select a saucpan which is sufficiently large for the ingredients used and will allow for the boiling and beating processes. It should have a firm handle to grasp while heating.

Into the saucpan put two cups of granulated sugar, one cup of milk, two squares of chocolate, and one teaspoonful of salt. Always include the salt, for it not only brings out the chocolate flavor, but adds a delicious zest to the fudge which can not be produced otherwise. Place the fudge mixture over a slow heat and constantly stir with a wooden spoon, without stirring, until the thermometer registers 235° F. If a candy thermometer is not available, drop a few drops of the fudge into cold water. If it forms a soft ball which will hold together and may be handled, remove the candy from the fire. Set it in a large bowl of cold water and let it stand undisturbed until there is practically no heat in the fudge mixture itself. Remove the fudge from the water at this point and add two tablespoons of butter, one cup of milk, one teaspoonful of vanilla, and one-half cup of chopped nuts. Gradually working in the butter, continue the beating, pushing the spoon forward, without stirring, until the whole becomes creamy and thick. When the mixture is stiff enough to knead, turn it out at once on a buttered plate. Then with a spatula shape the mass into an oblong, about one inch thick. Allow it to cool slightly and cut into the desired squares. If you are planning to use the fudge in any great distance, mold it in the shape of a bar, marking it lightly into squares; do not cut it through. When the fudge is thoroughly cooled, lift it in one piece from the plate, wrap it tightly in several sheets of paraffin paper, and pack in a box. In this way the center of the candy is kept creamy and moist.

Even with plain chocolate fudge, several variations are possible. Instead of the fudge mixture and before it is ready to turn on the plate, add one cup of finely-chopped walnuts, pecans or peanuts. Then continue the beating and when ready, mold on a buttered plate. Or, if you prefer, turn the fudge mixture, when it is stiff enough to knead, out on a buttered slab and knead. Then roll it into small balls or round loaves, and place on a buttered plate. Or, if you prefer, turn the fudge mixture, when it is stiff enough to knead, out on a buttered slab and knead. Then roll it into small balls or round loaves, and place on a buttered plate.

The afternoon-Tea Sandwich. At the afternoon tea—whether it is a friend or a pleasant family or a business party—a sandwich is a necessity. However delicious the cakes or the savory, the sandwiches, the sandwich plate is always the most popular. Sandwiches for this purpose should always be dainty bits of delicatessen. The bread should be cut very thin and each slice spread lightly with butter. When making sandwiches, the butter should be spread on very evenly, and each slice coated over the entire slice. This may easily be accomplished if the butter is first creamed until it is soft and smooth. Never, under any circumstances, use melted butter. In most cases it is always best to butter both sides of the bread when making sandwiches, because the butter coating prevents the filling from penetrating and softening the bread. Care is taken to match the slices when making sandwiches, their edges are smooth, and out in the open, they are not less waste when trimming off the crusts.

To make the sandwiches as dainty as they should be, always remove the crusts. For this reason spread the filling sparingly toward the edges. In any case, the filling in afternoon-tea sandwiches should be spread on very evenly, and each slice coated over the entire slice. This may easily be accomplished if the butter is first creamed until it is soft and smooth. Never, under any circumstances, use melted butter. Care is taken to match the slices when making sandwiches, their edges are smooth, and out in the open, they are not less waste when trimming off the crusts.

Sandwiches for afternoon tea are all ways more attractive when they are cut in fancy shapes. It is well, however, to select such shapes as cut in the most economical manner. Square sandwiches, triangles and diamonds can all be cut without waste if care is taken. If rounded out, the trimmings should be utilized as suggested above.

Thin Sandwiches. Mince fine one-half cup of butter. Add one-half cup of cream, one-half cup of milk, one-half cup of tomato catsup, and enough mayonnaise to make a thick paste. Mix together, and spread on thin slices of whole wheat bread, or graham bread, and a thin layer of cream cheese. Cover with another slice of bread, and cut in desired shapes. Press together, trim, and cut in desired shapes. Press together, trim, and cut in desired shapes.

Just as the last cup was being poured, Virginia felt sure, about to invite her feebly to go along with them and then, as if by magic, the car came rattling up the road. Virginia knew Richard Masters would be in it. Now it was going to happen—just as she had feared. He was going to see her together, trim off crusts, and out in the open, they are not less waste when trimming off the crusts.

was bent over his roof, he wore an old felt hat and was in his shirt-sleeves. Now he had a bite. There was swift jerk of the line, a flash of silver through the air, the snapping sound of a fish landed on a wooden platform—and the man raised his eyes.

Fifteen feet away from him Virginia stood, open-mouthed at Richard Masters. "I'm 'n' fishin'," he said, and the first star of embarrassment had left his boyish brown eyes. "It's nice out here, isn't it?" Virginia answered after a pause. There was a sigh in her voice. Her eyes still had that vague sweetness that usually came to them when she was alone.

"Why did you cut me up there in front of the clubhouse?" he said abruptly. "I didn't," Virginia stuttered. She was carrying her hat and the sun found threads of gold in her rumpled hair. Suddenly she remembered her fishing. She spoke very simply and very truthfully, and Virginia replied, "I was lonely. Because, I guess, I'm always lonely."

"The question hung in the air. Virginia did not answer Richard Masters, but her eyes must have done so, for a moment later he was still staring at her with that same look of surprise and admiration. And though she had super with the others, with a certain attentive young man, of course, to pass her time, she did not go home in the truck. In the moonlight she skimmed the hills in a ratty old car, and when she went upstairs to join Martha her eyes were stary with a promise she had just given.

The Girl Without a Man

By ANNE LARDNER

"I'm not getting," Virginia gave a vicious tug at the stocking she was pulling as though that settled the matter. Martha Carson, vigorously polishing nails already pink and shiny, stopped short and stared at the slim, fair-haired girl opposite. "Why, you're perfectly silly."

Curious as the town's grime stirred in the soft spring breeze, in the middle of a Saturday afternoon in May, Virginia was sitting at the window of the moderate-sized room the two girls occupied together, because both were employed by the Struthers Chemical Company. She was looking out at the city of Birmingham. It was the annual outing of the clerical force to be held Monday at a country club.

There was a hot flush on the pale, clear skin. Martha was not very much, but Virginia read books about chemistry on the fly. Virginia had been so advanced ever since she came to Birmingham. It didn't seem fair.

The taller girl struggled to control her voice. There was almost a break in it. "Yes, Martha, what's the use of trying to hide it? I'm ashamed to be seen without a man. But you came last year. Last year, didn't you?"

Virginia did not answer right away. She had walked over to the window and was looking out at the smoke stacks, at the hills and the blue sky beyond them. Suddenly she wheeled around. "That was fine determination in her wide-grown eyes. When she flung out her sentences she knew she was not telling the truth. There was a reason why this thing was different from any other in the twenty-one years of her whole existence.

The day of the cutting dawned, fine and clear, with a soft breeze. A flawless blue sky canopyed the whole earth. The air was sweet with May and gay little flowers edged the road over which the big trucks of the chemical company moved. The girls, Virginia and Martha, were sitting in the front of the car. Virginia was looking out at the smoke stacks, at the hills and the blue sky beyond them. Suddenly she wheeled around. "That was fine determination in her wide-grown eyes. WHAT IS YOUR PET ILLNESS?

Do You Derive Satisfaction From Having Some Allments?

Many people, whether they are conscious of it or not, derive satisfaction from being ill. Say you are afflicted with bad digestion, rheumatism, or a headache. You have many ailments. You have many ailments. You have many ailments.

You are in the habit of mending casually that white beard is rank poison to you. You are in the habit of mending casually that white beard is rank poison to you. You are in the habit of mending casually that white beard is rank poison to you.

Then you go to a candid and informed physician, who looks you over and tells you the startling truth that no horse ever had a sounder stomach; you can eat anything that any normal person eats without the least injury; your trouble is all in your head; you can get over it whenever you are ready to help yourself.

If you have a proper humility you may be grateful to that candid doctor. But many of us lack proper humility; so we leave the candid physician in much indignation because he has dared to tell us the truth. We are interested in an indignation with no respect and told us we must help ourselves. Whereupon we are ripe for good.

Dr. Hookum, who will perform a major operation, winning a fee of a thousand dollars and our warm affection—Will Payne in the Saturday Evening Post.

Stepping Stones. Doing the best you can is the practice you need to help you do better.

At the beginning of this New Year, we wish to tell you all of the first step in a great long-time program to place this—our University—in a position where it will be of greatly increased service to the State of Maine.

University of Maine

To the Alumni, Alumnae, Former Students, and Friends of the University of Maine.

There is a great new driving force at the University of Maine. There is a spirit of progress; an atmosphere of things happening. This new onward incentive is personified in our new president, Dr. C. C. Little. It is felt alike by the undergraduates, the faculty, the trustees, and all of us who recently have come in contact with the University.

At the beginning of this New Year, we wish to tell you all of the first step in a great long-time program to place this—our University—in a position where it will be of greatly increased service to the State of Maine.

This is a program in which you will all be asked to do your share. It is only by the mutual co-operation of all interested that material progress can be made. That you may have a full understanding of the situation upon which to base your judgment, we propose to place before you in a series of short talks in the press of the State, the present situation and the future opportunities and duties of the University.

After you have this information before you, the immediate call upon your loyalty to the University and to the State will be for the support of a campaign to help build a great new (Gymnasium-Armory in memory of the Maine men who gave of their best in the World War.

The University of Maine was represented by 1700 men enrolled in the military and naval forces of the United States. Of these, forty-one were called upon to make the supreme and forever glorious sacrifice of giving their lives.

It seems entirely proper that the first step in this great program of advancement of the institution which they all loved should be a memorial to them.

It is also fitting that this memorial should take the form of a great building in which the students at the University shall receive instruction in physical training and in military science and tactics.

In such a building will be taught team work, individual self-control and discipline and how to play the game.

This building will be built by your efforts and will perpetuate as a living force the spirit that makes duty clear and sacrifice even to death a privilege when the safety of the State and of the Nation is threatened.

This is one of a series of talks prepared by the University of Maine Alumni Memorial Association, and is intended to be a part of the program of the University of Maine. It is intended to be a part of the program of the University of Maine.

GOOD REASON FOR QUITTING

Bob Fitzsimmons May Have Been Wrong in Judgment Concerning "Games" of His Son.

The best story observed in print for some time is told by Joe Ylin in the Sun about young Robert Fitzsimmons. Young Fitz is considerably bigger and stronger than his father ever was, he is quick with his hands and with his head, he knows the science of the game, but it seems he can't stand up and take it. Mr. Ylin continues: "Ten years ago Old Fitz introduced Young Fitz to a party of friends at the former champion's New Jersey home. The father put on the gloves with his son and the latter surprised the visitors with a dazzling exhibition of science."

"He's very clever, ain't he?" remarked Old Fitz during a short rest. "Well, now I'll show you something!" Resuming the tilt, Old Fitz suddenly hooked his right to Young Fitz's chin, and the latter, with a gasp, suggested, pulled off his gloves and threw them on the floor, as he walked hurriedly out of the barn.

"He can box well," said the ancient Cornishman, "but he can't take a punch. He ain't a fighter."

"I stopped because I didn't want to lose my temper," explained the kid at the dinner table. "I didn't care to slug the old gent!"—New York Times.

LIGHT ON ANCIENT HISTORY
Discoveries Made in Old Tombs in Syria Reveal Important Fact Not Hitherto Known.

Two tombs about 4000 years old have been discovered at Byblos, Syria, by the excavations being carried on under the direction of General Gouraud, the French high commissioner, according to the Paris correspondent of The London Times.

The age is established by the discovery in one of them of a harpy; a curved sword with a gold handle; a seal of gold on which is engraved the name of a Pharaoh, and a gold scarabaeus ring beautifully carved, and a balm box of obsidian, mounted in gold and bearing the name of a Pharaoh.

This is stated to be the oldest inscription discovered in Syria, and proves that commercial relations between Egypt, Greece and Egypt were already active 2000 years before our era. The first recorded conquest of Syria by Egypt was made by Thothmes I (Thothmes) of the eighteenth century, B. C.
